

Greater Philadelphia Chapter

Kathryn Landis is an executive coach and keynote speaker. She works with newly elevated leaders, experienced executives who've outgrown what got them here, and the leadership teams around them. She speaks on team performance under pressure, AI-era leadership, the cost of conformity in senior roles, and career advancement as the definition of performance changes.

Earlier in her career, Kathryn held senior roles at American Express and ADP. She is an NYU adjunct professor and writes regularly for Harvard Business Review and Fast Company about the moments when leaders stop getting the results they once could and what it takes to lead differently. PCMA named her one of its Top 15 Speakers and selected her for its 2026–2027 Leading Class. Connect with her on LinkedIn and download her Team Effectiveness Assessment to pinpoint where focused attention can unlock greater momentum.
